

like the $400 per child, leaving that money in the family's home as opposed to having it out here in Washington, it is not just about numbers. It is about people. It is about the impact that this money in the family will have on these families.

Another example on the $400 per child, I was in with a group of people who had many of their children enrolled in parochial schools. I talked to them about the potential of government providing them some sort of tax assistance for parochial schools. And right away, they reacted no, no, no, no, we do not want any government support for our school. Because they are afraid with government support come government rules and regulations that may not match up with what our parochial schools are teaching, my own kids included that go to a parochial school.

So I explained to them how the $400-per-child tax credit allowed them to make the decision on what they were going to use their own $400 for. If they choose to use that $400 to help pay tuition at a parochial school, well, so be it. That is money that would have been sent to Washington that is now in their home, and they can then choose to make the decision to send their kids to a parochial school if they so desire. But it is not Washington telling them what to do with the money, and it is not Washington telling their parochial school what to teach in their school, but, rather, it is now the parents in their own home making the decision as to how to spend their own money.

I would like to wrap up my time here on the floor today with kind of just a brief summary of some of the things we have talked about. We have looked at the past, and we have looked at how in the past we had a series of broken promises to balance the budget.

Before 1994, we had Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, the budget deal of 1990. We looked at how, in 1993, they reached the conclusion on how to solve this problem. Rather than control Washington spending, the conclusion was to reach into the pockets of American citizens. I know for all the people out there, it was not the first time. I know it was part of the 1990 deal. I know it was part of the 1993 deal. But I also know that every time they reached in the pockets and took more money out here to Washington, all it did was allow them to spend more out here in Washington, and that is not what the people wanted.

That path of broken promises of the balanced budget and the path of higher taxes, that is over. It ended in 1994 when the American people stepped up to the plate and said enough is enough, it is going to stop. They put a new group in charge out here in Washington.

We are now 3 years into that new group. The new group has brought us a balanced budget, not in 2002 as promised, but 4 years ahead of schedule. The announcement today, great news, CBO, from the organization that watches budgeting out here: We are, in fact, running a surplus for fiscal year 1998. The first time since 1969, we are going to have a budget surplus.

Great news. Three years into this thing, we have done it by controlling the growth of Washington spending. We have been effective enough at slowing the growth rate of Washington spending, that we have not only gotten to a balanced budget 4 years ahead of schedule, we have been able to provide the American people with a tax cut.

When I say "we provide," shoot, it is the American people that earn that money. All we are doing out here in Washington is saying keep more of your own money. It is yours to start with, just do not send it out here to Washington. The present, the present has a balanced budget for the first time since 1969; The present, the present is lower taxes for the first time in 16 years; the present, the present is a restored Medicare, and done the right way, with feeling and understanding for our senior citizens.

The future. As we look forward to this, we have 3 major problems remaining. The first is we still have a $5.5 trillion debt staring us in the face; the second is the Social Security money that needs to be put aside for Social Security; and the third is taxes are still too high.

So as we look down the road to the future in this great nation, the National Debt Repayment Act which we have introduced in our office, bill number H.R. 2191, takes two-thirds of any surpluses that develop and it uses it to pay off the debt. Prioritizing, repayment to the Social Security Trust Fund for our senior citizens.

The good news under this bill is that by the year 2026, and maybe sooner, we will have repaid the entire Federal debt that will restore the Social Security trust fund for our senior citizens and it will allow us as a generation to pass this country on to our children debt-free.

I can think of no higher goal that we might have in this government today than to work to a point where we repay the Federal debt so our children can inherit a Nation that is absolutely debt-free. In doing so, we also restore the Social Security trust fund for our seniors.

The other one-third of the surpluses that are developing, let us use those to lower taxes, and let us set our vision for the future that we get the tax rate from 37 back to 25 percent. Would it not be great if one-third of all taxes paid by all Americans at every level of government was reduced, and those American citizens could keep it in their own pocket to decide what they would like to do with it, whether it be to help their children, whether it be to put their kids through college, whether it be to provide their kids with a private school, if that is what they would like to do, if they in their own wisdom think that is better for their children. But the bottom line is to leave that money in the hands of the people that earned it in the first place.

Would that not be a great vision for America? Paid off debts, so our children get a debt-free nation; a restored Social Security trust fund for our senior citizens; and lower taxes, a one-third reduction in the overall tax rate all across America?

Lest anybody think we cannot do it, I just remind the American people of what was said in 1995 when we were first elected. They said you cannot balance the budget and lower tax. Here we are, three years into it, four years ahead of schedule, with the budget balanced, taxes coming down and Medicare restored. It can be done, if it is the will of the people, and if the people get actively involved in making sure that this government does what they want this government to do.
